

New cooperation between product vendors

Foroso Communications and net-files offer jointly a new collaboration solution

Munich, July 10, 2002 – Foroso Communications and net-files enter into a strategic product partnership. Joint customers can securely manage and exchange their documents with net-files. Foroso's products enable them to communicate about these documents in real-time.

Foroso Communications, a leading vendor of Real-Time Enterprise Collaboration products facilitates applications such as eMeetings, eTraining, and Corporate eCommunication.

Due to the partnership with net-files, a leading vendor of document-based collaboration and Extranet services, all required data can now be managed with a secure team product, that enables document sharing between team members and business partners. All documents are stored in net-files and are available online to all team members at any time and at any computer.

The products of both partners emphasize security and ease of use. Security requirements are supported through SSL encryption, sophisticated user management with authentication, and easy to manage groups and roles. Ease of use is achieved through intuitive user interfaces and no need to install any software for the end user. Both products are completely browser-based at the client side and all functionality is implemented at the server side.

„The document management system of net-files is a great advantage for our customers“, says Franz Buchenberger, President and CEO of Foroso Communications . „All data for meetings and training can be provided efficiently to the whole team.“

„Foroso's product enables our customers to save travel cost and time“, states Thomas Krempl, CEO of net-files. „Online collaboration in real-time is an important extension for each team that works with documents.“

net-files enables the exchange and shared team access to any documents via the Internet. Access to data is independent of time, location, and end device. Besides all required software, net-files also provides the complete infrastructure for the operation of the applications. net-files is an extranet service that facilitates simple data exchange and thus effective collaboration between vendors, customers, employees, and business partners – at any time and beyond the company's location.
